TIDEWATER'S GAIL WINDISCH AWARDED PROFESSIONAL COMMUNITY ASSOCIATION MANAGER (PCAM®) DESIGNATION

Owings Mills, MD (August 2, 2018) – Tidewater Property Management (<http://www.tidewaterproperty.com>) would like to announce that Gail Windisch, Senior Director of Operations of Tidewater Property Management, has been awarded the Professional Community Association Manager (PCAM®) Designation by the Community Association Institute (CAI).

CAI is an international membership organization dedicated to building better communities and providing information, education, and resources to community association professionals through seminars, workshops, conferences, and education programs. Most of which lead to professional designations such as the Professional Community Association Manager Designation.

The PCAM® designation is the highest professional recognition available nationwide to managers who specialize in community association management. In order to earn the PCAM® designation, managers must have five years of community association management experience, successfully complete all six M-200 level programs, earn the Certified Manager of Community Associations (CMCA®) designation and complete an in-depth case study, among other things.

Since joining Tidewater in 2003, Gail has served as the Director of Association Property Management for the past four years and most recently promoted to Senior Director of Operations. She has played a vital role in the growth and development of Tidewater and with her new designation, a wealth of knowledge and experience.

"Gail is a most deserving recipient of the PCAM® designation. She's a strong leader and sets an example for others to follow." says Stanley Greenberg, President and CEO of Tidewater Property Management.
